Meet Our Growers

Godfrey Hirst and Feltex wool carpets proudly originate from New Zealand farms, capturing the essence of Aotearoa in a truly exquisite product. Using over 6 million kilos of New Zealand wool yearly, we stand as the world's largest wool carpet manufacturer. Our process involves cleaning the wool, spinning it into yarn at our Oamaru and Lower Hutt mills, and finally tufting it in Auckland, resulting in high-quality carpets that mirror our local conditions and design trends.

Today, allow us to introduce you to one of our growers Matangi Station. Nestled amidst Hawke's Bay's iconic landscapes of Mt Erin and Te Mata Peak, Matangi embodies mystic beauty: craggy mountains, rolling hills, fertile river flats, and 2.5 kilometers of river frontage. Matangi, meaning 'breeze' in Maori, perfectly describes this haven, especially during Hawke's Bay's scorching summers.

Austrian owner Robert Haselsteiner and Jamie Gaddum share a vision to provide top-quality New Zealand Angus beef exclusively for Kiwi's, not for export. Their sheep play a crucial role, maintaining pastures during colder months for fresh grass, benefiting both cattle and ewes during lambing.

Matangi Station, like many in New Zealand, thrives as a family affair. Jamie and Nicky Gaddum, along with their sons Max and Oscar, manage the farm. They focus on progressive farming practices and making their farm environmentally sustainable. The Gaddums and Haselsteiners plant thousands of native trees annually and secure gullies and streams.
